Unit 2: Age of Contact

Name: Date: Period:

Part I: Transitioning to a new Era

The Age of Contact was an era in Texas history when Spain was searching for gold and riches in the Americas. In the 1500s, Spanish conquistadors explored places like Mexico, Florida, New Mexico, and Texas. They hoped to find great wealth. These trips led to many encounters between Spanish explorers and American Indian tribes.

Some conquistadors, like Cortés, were very successful in seizing gold and resources from American Indians like the Aztecs in Mexico. Other conquistadors failed to find gold or wealth in the lands north of Mexico. Because of this, Spain lost interest in places like Texas. The Spanish focused instead on the area they had colonized around Mexico City. This changed when their enemy, the French, came to the coast of Texas in 1685.

Spain didn't want to give up their claim to Texas, so they needed to try something new in the northern areas. Their search for gold in Texas had failed, but that was only one of the reasons they had explored the area.

Match the reason for exploration on the left with its correct description on the right.

- | | |
|--------------|---|
| ___ 1) God | A) Gain fame and power for themselves and their country |
| ___ 2) Gold | B) Spread their Catholic faith to others around the globe |
| ___ 3) Glory | C) Become wealthy by claiming resources from other places |
- 4) Since the search for gold failed in Texas, what do you think Spain will focus on next in its attempt to maintain its claim on its northern frontier? Explain your answer.

Part II: A New Approach to Texas

After the French explorer La Salle came to Texas, the Spanish became interested in the area again. They didn't want the French taking over the northern frontier of New Spain. If the French claimed Texas, they would be one step closer to the land and resources like silver that the Spanish really valued in Mexico. The Spanish government needed a relatively cheap, convenient way to hold on to Texas. This came in the form of missions.

The Spanish began building religious communities called missions in Texas. The missions were run by Catholic religious leaders called friars, or frays. One of these friars, named Fray Francisco Hidalgo, wrote a letter to the new Spanish viceroys, or governors. In his letter, Fray Hidalgo wrote about some of the problems he had when trying to set up missions among the Hasinai American Indians in east Texas.

Read the excerpts from the "Description of the Tejas or Asinai Indians, 1691-1722" by Francisco Hidalgo as reported in Volume 31 of the Southwestern Historical Quarterly. Answer the comprehension questions that follow.

Excerpt I: The French Threat

I knew that the French were settling this section as well as that further on when it was known to be the territory of His Majesty bordering on the Mexican Gulf; and [it was also known] that, with great determination, they were encroaching more and more on these frontiers of New Spain.

Excerpt III: American Indian Resistance to Religious Conversion

We have not succeeded in getting [the Hasinai Indians] to put their houses close to the church, although they promised at first to do so. Therefore, there is no Christian doctrine imparted to them, first, because of the great repugnance they have for Christianity, and, second, because of the great distance there is between their houses and because of other motives and reasons they have. Their repugnance to baptism from past times is well known, for they have formed the belief that the water kills them. Some of those who have been baptized have died, both adults and children.
