

Warm-up: How do we know what we know?

Unit 1: Natural Texas and Its People

Name: Date: Period:

Your family is planting some new bushes and flowers in your backyard. As you are helping them dig, you find an old, beat-up box in the ground. When you open it, you find the following things:

- Concert tickets from a band you don't recognize.
- A magazine about cars and motorcycles.
- Movie ticket stubs
- A necklace with the initials C.J.R.
- A cassette tape player with a Rolling Stones cassette tape inside
- A faded picture of a girl and a dog
- Some letters written to someone named Dominick.

Question: You didn't know the people who lived in your house before you, but using this box of items what can you infer about the person who buried it?

- - - - - Cut Along This Line - - - - -

Warm-up: How do we know what we know?

Unit 1: Natural Texas and Its People

Name: Date: Period:

Your family is planting some new bushes and flowers in your backyard. As you are helping them dig, you find an old, beat-up box in the ground. When you open it, you find the following things:

- Concert tickets from a band you don't recognize.
- A magazine about cars and motorcycles.
- Movie ticket stubs
- A necklace with the initials C.J.R.
- A cassette tape player with a Rolling Stones cassette tape inside
- A faded picture of a girl and a dog
- Some letters written to someone named Dominick.

Question: You didn't know the people who lived in your house before you, but using this box of items what can you infer about the person who buried it?

How do we know what we know? Exit Ticket

1. Primary sources can be an excellent source of information about the past, however they also present some disadvantages. Place a checkmark next to each true statement about primary sources.

- Primary sources give us firsthand accounts of the past.
- Primary sources contain entirely fact-based information.
- Primary sources often include the opinions and biases of people who created them.
- Primary sources should be taken as the whole truth of an event.
- Primary sources rarely present different points of view about past events

2. Give an example of a primary source. Explain the benefits and drawbacks of using this type of source.

THE PORTAL
TO TEXAS HISTORY

How do we know what we know? Exit Ticket

1. Primary sources can be an excellent source of information about the past, however they also present some disadvantages. Place a checkmark next to each true statement about primary sources.

- Primary sources give us firsthand accounts of the past.
- Primary sources contain entirely fact-based information.
- Primary sources often include the opinions and biases of people who created them.
- Primary sources should be taken as the whole truth of an event.
- Primary sources rarely present different points of view about past events

2. Give an example of a primary source. Describe the benefits and drawbacks of using this type of source.

THE PORTAL
TO TEXAS HISTORY